DIVORCE IN RENO

what I deserved, although Dr. McKim tried to make it so hard for me; I am so happy, so happy," exclaimed Mrs. McKim, a nervous laugh manifesting her mental strain.

"I can now rest peacefully in my new little home until my father arrives in September, my mother being ill now. We shall take a good long hunting trip in the moun-

James Gilman, attorney for the defendant, stated to-night that he would take no further action in the case at present.

As Margaret Emerson, daughter of Captain Isaac Emerson of Baltimore, Mrs. McKim was a religious sister. Mrs. McKim was a member of the Baltimore Yacht Club, the Margaret, the Bay of Naples, The wedding took place in Christ Church, Baltimore, and the bride was escorted by her brother, Mr. McKim, who was not until 1909 that there came stories of infidelity in the McKim family. Both Mr. and Mrs. McKim denied the reports until the very day the divorce action was filed. Then they both admitted that they had turned a rubber lamp around her fingers and frequently laughed nervously. She said she had never been in the McKim family in Baltimore. He died in Irvington in 1904, summered in Newport in 1905, and resided in New York City in 1906.

Forced to Leave Dinner.
"At a dinner party in January, 1908, my husband insisted that I leave and retire. Naturally I refused. Then Dr. McKim threw me across the room.

"I felt that my life was not safe, he so frequently forgot himself. Sometimes he would come in at night and say, 'I feel as if I had best upset the lamp at his bedside and set fire to the furniture.'"

The McKim told her physician had seen some matters were between Dr. McKim and her, and she advised her to leave him. She did so, and after a few days Dr. McKim told her, "I have thought about you a great deal. I had left him," she confessed naively.

"He said, 'I am sorry I ever made a promise of good behavior from him, but here I am again as before.'"

Mrs. Glum said she thought that other proceedings will be taken by him also. Dr. McKim.

Don't Deny Engagement.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 13.—Now that

This report was given foundation-to-day when Mrs. Isaac Emerson, mother of Mr. McKim, returned from visiting her daughter in Reno and refused to deny it.

"I saw a story in the papers recently that said that my daughter Alfred Van derbilt when she gets her divorce," said Mrs. Emerson to a reporter.

"Well, will you deny that story?"

"Oh, no. Just don't bother about it."

Back to Newport.

Mrs. McKim will come back to Newport from which she has been exiled during her months of residence in Reno to establish the right to sue for divorce, and mingle with the friends of her late husband, Alfred Vanderbilt's relatives and associates.

Mrs. McKim met her husband six months ago in Reno, where she had been for some time, took a party of guests around the country, and returned to Newport with them among them. Since then she has been spending her summers at Newport and has been the cause of much gossip. She was only sixteen when she married and had a big, beautiful, intelligent son, and she made a big hit in the Vanderbilt circle.

Although she is from Baltimore and not from New York there are none of the frills and fancies of the very rich who live on Fifth avenue that Mrs. McKim does. She is a person of a very simple and unassuming French poodle and she and the French poodle expressly to take care of the poodle, whose name is "Stop."

She has been especially honored by Alfred Vanderbilt, who has given many parties at his house, and she has been entertained here with Mr. and Mrs. Heggins Vanderbilt at the Hotel Ansonia. She has won many prizes, being fully as accomplished as the most famous of the French poodles, with rules like an Amazon and with a dash of the French poodle.

She has a residence in New York as well as Baltimore, a villa in the city of Rome, and a house in the city of 7,000 acres in South Carolina. She is blonde and slightly plump, and she is a very good person. She does not go in for jewels and dresses.

Lawyer Michelman, when seen by a Boston Sunday American reporter at his office in the Fenmore Building, spoke very freely in behalf of his client. He said:

"In 1907, he was treasury of the Russian Government at Tiflis, was robbed of large sums of money. You doubtless know that they are in Russia many dissatisfied subjects, their dissatisfaction arising from tyranny, and the Government claims that the robbery was committed by some of the subjects of the Government, who committed the robbery sent the money to all the kings courts of Europe, such as the king of Spain, the king of Portugal, of it, and some of them came to this country and tried to dispose of it here.

"The Government also claims the fact that my client hardly has not been in Russia for fifteen years, and for a general time has been in Switzerland, studying the sciences of the Government."

"Mr. Weaslee is a Russian of study and refinement and comes from exalted family."

"The Government is associated with the revolutionary movement in Russia. The Russian government has been in the name of the Emperor, the name of Andrew Ruloff, but this expedition I can disprove and will when case comes up."

"Where is the money was found?"

"The possession of my client, but he has got this money, and whence it came, I cannot say."

Friends Stick by Him.

"I took his name because I am the attorney in this city who understands Keweenaw, and Weyland does not speak word of English. The feeling is so strong among his friends that he is snubbed and he is so highly respected, that this is every prospect of his getting better the near future."

When a reporter went to the Squamish home of the prisoner he found that they had started work on a new building on July 21 to live in during the summer. There were 10 men working on the place. The man, Knudsen was not at home but he was expected to be there in a few days. He lived there for some months, that he is now traveling occasionally to New York, Chicago and Philadelphia and that he got a trial of mail.

COLEMAN AWAITING FIANCEE'S VISITS

GREENFIELD, Aug. 13.—George W. Coleman, the young Cambridge bank wrecker, is waiting impatiently in Greenfield for the third visit of Miss Mamie Miss Hightower, his fiancée. He has had two visits from her since he was brought here. The last one was on July 19. He is allowed to see her for one-half hour every month.

Miss Hightower says she will wait patiently for Coleman's release. It may take the full fifteen years. Good bye.

It is reported that already they are planning to go to California, where Coleman may forget the past. Miss Hightower believes that her sweetheart was wronged against than slung, that he was the victim of crafty men. She assures Between the monthly visits Coleman is comforted by a photograph of his fiancée, which is in his cell. After each visit he visits here Coleman is very cheerful, even happy for a man in jail under long sentence.

morning hours occupied in keeping the main corridor of the big brick building clean, sweeping and dusting, polishing the brass work and making beds for the other prisoners. In the afternoon he has time for perusal of a newspaper or magazine, and no doubt often dreams of the time when Miss Lightfoot will next appear to spend another half hour with him and in her cheery way dispel for a time the

The jail is on an elevation in the northeast corner of the village, with adequate grounds that broaden out into land that is cultivated by some of the trustful inmates. The air is always pure and fresh and the view to all points of compass is picturesque. The nearest building is more than a thousand feet away, and nothing breaks the beautiful outlook to the west excepting the Sheshbun Mountain range beyond a

DENIES INTEREST IN

INDIAN CONTRACTS

SULPHUR, Okla., Aug. 12.—Colonel Cecil A. Lyon, Republican national committeeman of Sherman, Texas, enlisted

Investigation into the more bribery charges before the congressional committee here to-day by bringing the "short and ugly" word again into play in denying the charges that he was interested in the contracts, and was quizzed along these lines. The charges made by Murphy were mentioned, and Lyon hotly declared: "When Congressman Murphy said before residence in Oklahoma that I had traveled through Oklahoma in the interest of the McMurray contracts, he is either guilty of making a statement from a standpoint of ignorance or he deliberately lied.

He availed himself of the privilege of his floor and cannot be reached by law. It also made a statement out of my presence and could not be reached by me physically.

Day in White Water.
PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., Aug. 13.—
In a report to the United States hydro-graphic office here, the statement is made of a remarkable phenomenon, filed by Captain H. Samsels of the American barkentine Aurora on arrival from Callao, Peru.
The vessel was delayed by a dangerous youth

On June 12, in latitude 34° 30' N and longitude 84° 50' W, the vessel's course brought her into an area of snow white water. The extension was so large as to require nearly an entire day's sail to traverse. Its mingling with the natural ocean water was clear and definitely defined in color, creating a marvelous scene of marine beauty. Investigation failed to show the phenomenon to be due to submarine volcanism or other upheaval.

BEAT THE HIRE THROUGH THE WALLS INTO OUR NEW ANNEX

This means much to us. It means infinitely more to New England's Great Buying Public. Every blow of the hammer brings the big Gilchrist Annex nearer completion—Brings nearer the time when we will have a new entrance on Hamilton Place, another on Music Hall Place—adding nearly 40,000 feet of selling space and giving us four added floors and a basement floor. But the facts that interest you NOW are these: We've been urging the men in charge of the work to use every effort in quickening the work—they've exceeded their own expectations and ours.

Their Workmen Now Demand Floor Space in Our Various Departments Weeks Ahead of the Specified Time. There Is but One Way to Meet Their Demands—Quick, Decisive Disposal of Merchandise Is the One and Only Solution

They've got to have room—we've got to make it at once—walls are coming down on every floor—false partitions going up—cases and counters being placed and hundreds of changes being made—Conditions that are responsible for

An Alteration Sale of Tremendous Proportions

COLEMAN AWAITING FIANCEE'S VISIT

GREENFIELD, Aug. 13.—George W. Coleman, the young Cambridge boat wrecker, is waiting impatiently in Greenfield for the third visit of Miss Mabel Hightower, his fiancée. He has had two visits from her since he was brought here. The last one was on July 19. He is allowed to see her for one-half hour every month.

Miss Hightower says she will wait patiently for Coleman's release. It may take the full fifteen years. Good behavior, which is expected in his case, will reduce it some. They hope that Coleman may get out at the end of ten years. But even if it takes fifteen years for him to expiate his crimes, he believes he will find Miss Hightower waiting to wed him and help him begin life anew.

It is reported that already they are planning to go to California, where Coleman may forget the past. Miss Hightower believes that Coleman will be a devoted husband and a good father. She has suffered against that slating, that he was the victim of crafty men. She assures that her love for him is stronger than ever and that she will wait for him.

Colombian's incarceration begins with a morning hours occupied in keeping the cell clean, sweeping and dusting, polishing the floor and the walls. He is then assigned to prisoners. In the afternoon he is taken for perusal of a newspaper or magazine. When Mike Hightower will next appear in court, he will be charged with the possession of a gun. His attorney says he will be charged with the possession of a gun. His attorney says he will be charged with the possession of a gun.

DENIES INTEREST IN INDIAN CONTRACTS

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 13.—Colonel Cecil A. Lyon, Republican national committeeman of Sherman, Texas, endeavored today to make a professional courtesy fee here today by bringing the "short and snappy" letter of the McMurtry committee to the attention of the committee, and was quite successful. He was warmly welcomed by Murphy, who mentioned, and Lyon took occasion to mention, the McMurtry letter before committee in Washington that I had written. He also mentioned the letter of the McMurtry committee, in either case, as being a "very good" one. He stated of ignorance or of deliberately "misleading" the committee.

"He availed himself of the privilege of making a statement of his own," he also made a statement out of my presence, and I am sure that he was not only a "very good" one, but a "very good" one.

Colonel Murphy should be called before this committee and made to prove that he was not interested in the McMurtry letter, and that he was not interested in the McMurtry letter.

IN MILK WHITE OCEAN.
American Barkentine Sails Entire
Day in White Water.
 PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., Aug. 13.—

In a report to the geographic office here, the statement is made of a remarkable phenomenon, observed by Captain H. Sampaño of the American barkentine steamer Aurora on arrival from Callao, Peru. On June 17, in latitude 11 degrees south and longitude 80 west, the vessel's course brought her into an area of super white water. The expanse was so large as to require nearly an entire day said to traverse. Its merging with the natural ocean water was clear and demarcate defined in color, creating a necklace scene of marfais. The phenomenon failed to show the phenomenon to be due to submarine volcanic eruption of other upheaval.

A NEW REMEDY FOR ALL SKIN DISEASES

The discovery by a chemist of the (two) is me, Cadum, is recognized as one of the most important advances in medical circles in recent years. Cadum is made of one of Nature's medicinal plants, the extract of which has been combined with other ingredients, each possessing in a marked degree valuable therapeutic properties. The proportion of each ingredient has been carefully determined after careful experimentation and investigation, so that a perfected product for the treatment of skin diseases has been the result. Cadum is the most effective agent known in the treatment of eczema, two to four weeks' time being sufficient to cure ordinary cases. From the first moment, when applied, distinct and rapid relief is felt, and where the disease presents an unusual character, the itching is relieved.

active itching, skin troubles, such as salt rheum, ringworm, itch, acne, eczema, itching piles, chafing, prickly heat, boils, inflamed skin, red noses, pimples, blackheads, psoriasis, herpes, nettle, etc. Cadum is entirely free from any mercury or other poisonous and dangerous admixtures or animal products, and is the only skin agent that meets the U. S. Pharmacopoeia standard, for which standard of purity it is set by the U. S. Pharmacopoeia, and complies with that standard, so as to insure the greatest efficiency. Its color, Cadum so nearly matches that of the skin that an application is scarcely noticeable. An important feature to be noted in connection armie a prerogative and cannot ignore the most delicate skin. Many of the results achieved by Cadum may be truly described as remarkable, and have exceeded the expectations of the chemist who gave it to the world. It is a powerful antiseptic that destroys bacteria, it is a powerful astringent, it soothes and exerts a wonderfully soothing and healing influence on the skin tissues. It is a regrettable fact that skin affections are still much misunderstood, and often the most complicated treatment is undertaken at great expense, whereas such a simple and inexpensive remedy as Cadum would have cured them.

BOSTON MAN'S VIEW ON IDAHO RAILROAD

Laramie, Hahns Peak & Pacific
In Strategic Position and Being Extended

A Boston gentleman Mr Whitney of

A Boston gentleman Mr Whitney of Whitney, Watson & Co who has just returned from a trip of inspection of the Inland Empire Peak & Pacific railroad writes interestingly. Briefly he says, "The Laramie, Helena, Great Falls & Pacific railroad now extends from Laramie to Fox Park a distance of fifty five miles. Construction is going ahead so rapidly that within a year it will reach Cheyenne fifty miles from Fox Park. It will greatly facilitate Laramie railroad a trackage of 100 miles. Here is to be found, probably the largest known body of soft coal which is being put into operation to deliver to the railroad 10,000 tons daily. Engineers estimate that this will require about 600,000 tons of coal, which largely will be exhausted during the next three years. A large revenue will flow immediately from the increased production of iron ore, steel, live stock and general coal.

The (farm) road will occupy a strategic position of great importance, which together with the earthen wall will, it is expected, be a great help in the defense of the area.

FATHER O'CALLAGHAN LAUDS AMERICAN BOY SCOUT PLAN

Very Rev. Peter J. O'Callaghan, C. S. P., is now beginning his second term as national president of the C. T. A. U. He was born in Milford, this State, and when young was taken by his parents to Salem, where he was brought up. After graduating from Harvard University in the class of 1888 he spent six months in St. John's Seminary at Brighton. Then he decided to join the Paulists, the great missionary order, of which Father Hacker was the founder.

FATHER O'CALLAGHAN.

An interesting thing in connection with his parish work is that he is an enthusiastic and earnest supporter of the Boy Scout movement, just started here last year.

"I believe in that movement most implicitly," he said, "and I'll tell you why in a sentence or two. It is calculated to make better and brighter the lives of our boys in the great cities. With their lives as boys made better and brighter, they are bound to be better men, more useful citizens. No priest who has worked and lived for seven years in the thickly populated parts of our large cities like his city, New York or Chicago can doubt for a moment that it is his duty to support any movement which takes the boys out of the slums, out of the tenements, out of the streets, and gives them a chance to get into the open air, to get into the country, to get into the life of the people."

9-Year-Old Boy Drives Brush 2,500 Miles

Abernathy Kids, having welcomed "Uncle" Teddy, return by Automobile instead of on horse back

The Abernathy Kids, famous because of their horse back ride from Oklahoma City to New York to meet Colonel Roosevelt on his return from jungle and Court, returned to their home in the far Southwest in their own Brush Runabout, with Louie, aged 9, at the wheel. They left New York July 6th and reached Oklahoma City July 29th.

The boys chose a Brush Runabout because it is the only car they could start and handle without help, and so simple mechanically they could understand everything about it. Their car was a standard stock model, an exact duplicate of the car you buy for $485. Louie did all the driving, his brother Temple being too small to properly manipulate the foot pedal.

Driving the car with one hand, while blowing the horn with the other, this 9-year-old boy threaded his way through the traffic and between lanes of cheering people out of New York City and into the open country, with the seeming indifference and freedom from worry that a racing driver would display under the same conditions.

Louie Abernathy is a wonderful boy, but no other car, except the Brush, could he have so successfully mastered in such a short time, and successfully managed under such trying conditions.

We have been consistently telling you about these features for years. We have been trying to prove to you what an investment the Brush would be for you, both from the standpoint of pleasure and utility. But it is sometimes hard to prove, by the evidence of someone you don't know, probably hundreds of miles away, just how reliable the Brush is. Here is a test made out in the open, with the eyes of the whole United States watching.

The Abernathy Kids are famous the world over. This feat of their driving a Brush car 2,500 miles has been watched carefully along every mile of the road. Thousands have seen this 9-year-old boy at the wheel. They have seen him start the motor and stop it. They have seen him drive up steep hills and over the roughest roads. They have talked to him—he has had him tell them how much fun he and his younger brother had and how easily he handled his Brush car.

Those of you who have doubted the claims we have made for the Brush can doubt no longer. Those of you who have been afraid that an automobile was something that only an expert could handle and that only a mechanic could understand, must look at the Brush in a new light.

There is a lesson in this Abernathy trip which you should take home to yourself. Think what it means to you to be able to buy an automobile for $485, which you, or any one of your family, can drive, which can be operated either for business or pleasure at an expense of less than one cent a mile.

Your income may depend on how much ground you can cover in a day, and how many people you can see in a day. If so, the Brush will pay for itself and make you money besides. You may be a contractor having several building jobs to oversee at one time. It is worth money to you to be able to make the rounds quickly and economically. For this work the Brush has no equal. You may be a physician. The ease with which the Brush can be started appeals to the physician, because he has to stop and start his car perhaps often than any other user, and so on down the list—merchant, manufacturer, city or country salesman, R. F. D. Carrier, farmer—all are using the Brush and are finding it the best investment they ever made.

The longer you delay investigating it, the longer you may be doing yourself an injustice, the longer you may be postponing the opportunity to increase your income and decrease your expenses.

We have not said a word about the pleasure side of the Brush. The Abernathy Kids have demonstrated that feature so well that we need say little about it. No car offers more as a pleasure car, except size and carrying capacity. No car offers as much, when you take into consideration the lack of tire trouble and the ease and economy with which it can be operated—all of which go to make automobilizing for pleasure worth while.

No tour—no endurance run—no race ever answered so many questions important to the prospective motor car buyer as this feat of a 9-year old boy driving a Brush runabout from New York City to Oklahoma City.

Our Boston salesroom and Brush dealers everywhere have Brush cars at your disposal for demonstration purposes. They are kept in readiness to prove just how valuable the Brush would be to you. Decide right now to examine the Brush, ride in it, drive it, to see for yourself just how it can be adapted to some particular use or uses, either in your working or playing time, or both.

WHAT I DID YESTERDAY

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal Company. Used by permission.

ON MY SATURDAY AFTERNOON OFF

I FEEL that yesterday was the most critical period in my whole life. I had made a great resolution—nothing more or less than putting dear Billy to the very severest test a man ever triumphs over or sinks under. We had an appointment for a swim in the surf, and I DELIBERATELY told Billy to invite his office chum and his CHORUS GIRL friends. Oh, you don't know what this resolution cost me! Suppose Billy should—the thought was maddening, but I never faltered. I just turned Billy loose among those chorus girls, all pretty as peaches and wearing the most STY-LING bathing suits. Well! Billy just looked 'em over in his good-natured way—then (bless him!) stuck to me like a burr all the rest of the afternoon!

THE MEGAPHONE MAN AT BOSTON POSTOFFICE

Megaphone Man escorts a party of visitors to the Postoffice and waits for a glance at the carriers. Times when the carriers sort their mail or make up their routes.

MEGAPHONE MAN—You now see how most of our letter carriers work when they're not swapping conversation with the stenographers or talking baseball or politics with the men folks.
FAIR DAMEL (of forty or thereabouts)—Who is that one little man over there? (Pointing to dignified individual, short of stature). It seems to me that I have seen him before.
MEGAPHONE MAN—You probably have not seen him before, but you may have seen Little Jeff in the BOSTON AMERICAN. Many people make that mistake. That's Billy Kennally, who supplies the mail for the Pemberton Building. His stunts in the salt water would make Annette Kellerman try diving with ammonia, and socially he could give you a monologue stung on romance and love that would make Laura Jean Libbey's book like a lesson from a primer. He's also some dopster.

on politics, and down here they say he's protected both Bitter and Pitts would win.

FRESH KID—That Little Jeff's a talented cuss, but who is the Glomby Gus beside him?
MEGAPHONE MAN—You can generally find him down around Purchase street and Atlantic avenue. That, does and gentlemen, is John Newman, who you might recognize him better by his postoffice name, "Hippo." Just now it is because he has to buy a new suit. You see a messenger boy brought him one down from the hatter's and didn't recognize it and began kicking around, thinking it was Billy Quinn's. (Pointing to unburied individual and nudging her chum).—There's a messenger boy brought him one down from the hatter's and didn't recognize it and began kicking around, thinking it was Billy Quinn's.

MEGAPHONE MAN—In the Tremont building, my good people, we have a strange combination. They are Gene Bosson, Harry Stewart and Ed. (Pointing to unburied individual and nudging her chum).—There's a messenger boy brought him one down from the hatter's and didn't recognize it and began kicking around, thinking it was Billy Quinn's.

and Dick Johnson, who knows every body on South street. Down here they call them the salty trio. They keep bachelor apartments in the Back Bay. Three rooms and a kitchenette. They without an ice chest.

FAT MAN—How can they afford it? MEGAPHONE MAN—Afford it! You better ask Walter Perkins that question. He is the J. P. Morgan of the Postoffice. Last year he went to Europe and was gone a few months; this year he's going down to Bermuda for a vacation. They say that some of the brokers down in the Exchange building slip him over a tip now and then on the market and Walter draws down a bundle without taking much of a chance.

PRETTY GIRL (to her companion)—I do believe that fellow is blinking at me. Look right over there. That good looking chap, see, he's doing it again.

HER COMPANION (to Megaphone Man)—That fellow blushing. Who is he?

MEGAPHONE MAN—That fellow blushing? Well, he's doing it again. He has them in every building on School street. He spends much of his spare change to buy pound boxes of candy, but it really isn't necessary, as they say he can make good with his winning ways. He lives in Ward 8, but it is a strange thing that his letter carrier has never been able to find him there.

FAT MAN—All these fellows seem to think about is the sort stuff. Point them out Arthur Mater and show 'em something about him.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Mr. Mater, ladies and gentlemen, is the prize baseball player of the Postoffice. He has told everybody in the Board of Trade building how the Red Sox are going to win the pennant and why. Notice that he has three of his fingers down. He got those while trying to show some of the kids on the Sullivan Square playground how this Speaker gathers in a hot one.

DISMURF LADY—Would you mind telling me who delivers the mail in the Tremont building? My daughter works there.

MEGAPHONE MAN—In the Tremont building, my good people, we have a strange combination. They are Gene Bosson, Harry Stewart and Ed. (Pointing to unburied individual and nudging her chum).—There's a messenger boy brought him one down from the hatter's and didn't recognize it and began kicking around, thinking it was Billy Quinn's.

ing in the building as it sounds like a natural imitation of a fat man. MEGAPHONE MAN (apologetically)—I meant no offence. Over there is the real police. Henry True—married soon and he has no eyes for

He also knows Curtis Guild well enough to call him "Curt," and some of the boys say that if he was introduced to Taft he would soon call him Big Bill.

Best Jokes By the Comedians

IN "The Follies of 1910" Jacques Kruger accurately portrays John D. Rockefeller. As he enters, he greets the other members in the scene, which include Carnegie, James J. Hill, J. P. Morgan and Hetty Green, with:

"How do you do, everybody?"

"The same as you do, John," is the reply in chorus.

"HOW do you feel today, John?" asks Hetty G.

"O, I'm up to the standard," says John.

B. RICHARDSON, impersonating Weston, the pedestrian, enters covered with dust.

"Who are you, and what are you doing here?" he is asked.

"I am walking from California to New York."

"But you know," asks Jim Hill, "that you are cheating the railroad."

"Well, if I am, I guess I'm the first one that could ever do it."

IN the first scene, which represents a rehearsal of the "Follies," it is discovered that the prima donna is missing, and the rehearsal can't go on. Suddenly Grace Tyson, an unknown comes out from the audience that she can take the part, and she is asked to come to the stage. The stage manager directs her of her outer garments, revealing her shapely form in lights. The unknown's "mother" shouts from the audience when she sees her daughter's sparse attire.

"Say, ain't there something goes with that?"

The stage manager puts his arm around Grace and walks off the stage with her, calling back to her "mother":

"O, yes, anybody would."

THEN comes a street scene in Reno, showing a bunch of sharpshooters about to take some pictures of a fake fight. A white man and a colored man have been engaged to pose, these parts being taken, respectively, by Billy Reeves and Bert Williams. The manager of the outfit explains to Williams:

"Now, you do as we tell you and pose in this fight and then every time the pictures are shown anywhere you got two dollars per."

"Yes, perHAPS," replies Williams, in his droll way.

WHEN everything is in readiness for the fake mill the manager slaps Williams on the back and tells him to get into the ring.

"Have you got your speech?" he asks of him.

"Well," says the fake Johnson, "I've got it now, but you'd long ago will have it can't tell."

ANOTHER scene represents the now defunct Cafe de L'Opera, with a horde of waiters, coat boys, hat boys, glove boys, cane boys, each after his tip. Rickel and Watson, as two strangers, in New York, wander in and order a couple of drinks. For these two humble sips they are charged $4.95. They grasp and hand the waiter a $10 bill, saying:

"Keep the change and make it grand larceny."

"ONE year ago, when I got married, the orchestra played 'Three Little Maids from School,' and do you know a funny coincidence happened yesterday? The store brought three babies to our home."

"Good heavens! When I got married six months ago, the band played the Sextette from 'Florodora.'"

SAM—Say, Rastus, Miss Helen Gaspie says she'd like to meet you very much.

Rastus—Yo' go and tell her I ain't no gas meter.

"SAY, Sam, where'd you get dat medal?"

"I got dat for saving a young lady's life."

"How's dat?"

"I married her."

"HOW do you do? Pardon my gloves."

"Here! Here! Don't kid me."

"SAY, Sam, what is your favorite joke book?"

"The Boston & Maine time table."

"MY girl thinks so much of me she calls me her shining light."

"You don't see the joke, she calls you her shining light because she turned you down and you refused to go out."

"DO you know that the Darwinian theory is that we are descendants of monkeys?"

"My, you haven't changed much, still, the monkeys are very smart animals, because they are educated in the higher branches."

"DON'T I look after you when you didn't have a nickel?"

"Yes, and you look after me while I have a nickel."

A WOMAN and a boy boarded a street car. When the conductor came to collect the fares, the woman opened her purse and took out a nickel.

"You'll have to pay for the boy," said the conductor.

"Well, I guess I won't. I never paid for him before, and I won't pay for him now."

"How old is he?" asked the conductor.

"How do I know?" asked the woman. "I never saw him before."

A YOUNG lady attended a fashionable musicale where a noted pianist was the lion of the evening. After the artist had played several selections, a young lady leaned over to an elderly gentleman sitting next to her and queried:

"What do you think of his execution?"

Whereupon the unappreciative old gentleman exclaimed:

"I fear it."

A N Irishman fell from the tenth story of a building to the pavement below. A crowd gathered quickly about him, and among them a priest, who asked:

"Are you hurt, my good man?"

Pat, a little dazed, jumped up, felt his sides, kicked his legs, waved his arms and said:

"Here, I'm not hurt, a bit, be gobha."

"Vivacious," said the good father. "God was with you in that fall."

"Well," exclaimed Pat, "if He was, He was certainly going some."

A N Englishman visiting London to witness the funeral of the late King Edward stopped at a hotel which boasted of having the only musical bathtubs in all England. In the morning, accompanied by the sweet strains of music, he entered the bathroom and stepped into the tub of water.

The bathtub started to play "God Save the King," and he, being a true Englishman, had to stand up in the water for half an hour.

A MAN elbowed his way through the crowd at the ticket office at a railroad station and asked the agent how much it cost to go to Chicago.

"Twenty dollars," answered the agent.

"I have only five dollars," wailed the man.

"How far can I go for my five dollars?"

"And everybody in the crowd told him.

A MAN having one leg longer than the other entered a saloon to get a drink. He happened to be standing on his short leg when he gave his order to the bartender, who then turned around to mix the drink. The man stretched out his long leg as the bartender turned around again.

"Where's the little man that wanted this drink?" asked the latter, who he was out?"

A FOREIGNER went into a Washington street restaurant and told the waiter he wanted a breakfast with mushrooms. The waiter couldn't understand him, and handed him a pad and pencil, telling him to write his order. The foreigner wrote the word "breakfast," and being unable to spell "mushroom," made a picture of one beside the word "breakfast." The waiter came back with a steak on a tray with an umbrella over it.

A BOSTON sport happened to miss his train and stopped at a farmhouse in the backwoods of Maine. The following morning he asked the farmer how much he owed him.

"Well," said the farmer, "you had supper, then you went down cellar and got pretty near all my cider, you made love to my daughter, you kissed my wife, and you had a bed and your breakfast this morning. Do you think ten cents is too much?"

By Frank Bush.

I CAME pretty near not getting here to-night. I just came from Chicago, and I left the town broke, so I had to beat my way. Just before the conductor came to me for a ticket, I pulled a little boy crying in a seat opposite to me. The conductor said to him:

"Come on, come on, where's your ticket? You'll have to get off if you haven't got a ticket."

The little fellow pleaded hard, and between his sobs said:

"I'm going to see my mother in Boston; she's dying. Won't you please let me ride free?"

The conductor stopped a moment, and then put his hand out to me for my ticket. Of course, I didn't have any, and tried to stall my way through.

"Where are you going?" says the conductor.

"Me! Me! Why—why—why, I'm going to the funeral."

O H, I've been to all kinds of places. Even been to Yankers. Have been to St. Croix, where all the rum comes from. By the way, do you know where ginger comes from? Why, I've been down to Jamaica.

"That's where ginger comes from. But it is pretty 'rum' place."

By Frank Morrell.

BRIDGET was searching for the whiskey bottle when her husband inquired:

"What is it you're looking for, liddy?"

"Nothing, Pat," she replied.

"Well," replied Pat, "you suspected the object of her search, 'ye'll find it in the bottle where the whiskey was."

"WHILE didn't you go to the assistance of the defendant in the fight?" asked the policeman.

"Sure," was the answer. "Of didn't know which way him was going to be the defendant, yer honor."

GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE YOU KNOW IN BOSTON

I was on a Nantasket boat Sunday afternoon. Councillor William F. Murray and two newspaper men were sitting on the forward deck and, as always happens when Murray is around, not to talking politics. The discussion was animated and authoritative on the part of Mr. Murray and the two newspaper men. One of the individuals who looked like a Mutt with a William F. Murray of the Governor's bush shaved off. This person was Councilman and a candidate for Congress. He was sitting next to me and he was in the Ninth district. He was wriggled about in an effort to hold them in. He failed. He pulled a camp stool over to the side of the deputations and "I may look easy, but you can't put me down," he said, "I'm a tough one."

He expressed his opinion of John F. Fitzgerald in no uncertain manner and he regretted exceedingly that Storow would have your little joke. And that's all. He went on to say he departed in happy ignorance that the life of the public life who he had been living down the law to a were ever worthy of trust were two, prospective Congressmen. When he was late Patrick A. Collins and Theodore Roosevelt.

I LISTEN to the tale that "Jimme" says. He says that the Hon. James A. Hutton—tells. It is a harrowing tale about how he nearly made a lot of money. Got it? NEARLY MADE A lot of money.

The Hon. James A. Hutton represents Ward 4 and 5 in Charlestown at the House of Representatives, and he wants to bet that he is going to be the first. Now let him tell how he "nearly got the money."

"I was in my office one day last week, when a prosperous looking man over the phone just what he wanted. I had never seen before. He asked me my business address, befriended. Of course, I was looking into the office. He told me that he which I gave him and which he tended for as many Democratic votes as I could possibly get and incidentally votes for the ward committee favorable to me. So I asked him, 'How are you going to vote, John?' To my astonishment when a hunky worried looking individual rushed into my office, walked quickly to the side of my client, and in a soothing tone, said, 'Come along George, the King of Denmark is waiting to grant you an audience.'"

"I did not have to be enlightened. I saw it in a flash. The $1,000 retainer was a lunacy, and my prospective client was a bug. Yuh, I nearly made a lot of money."

"INGENUITY seems to be one of the dominant features in the makeup of some men," says Councilman James M. Currier. "There are not many ungrateful beings in my ward, but a decent body. Well, of course, I have had a few experiences with such persons which I shall never forget."

"A voter living in my ward came to me one day with a pitiful story of how his only son had died and he did not have the money with which to allow a decent burial. Well, of course, I saw to it that his son received a commodious funeral place."

"When the primary came around in November, I passed through the sev-

"This looked like good business, and I became interested immediately. He sat at my desk and with my fountain pen signed a check for $1,000 as a retainer. My eyes nearly popped out of my head. Just think; $1,000 for a retainer, and I had visions of more money coming from the same source. If I could get the property settled up."

"It then asked him for all the information that he could give me in relation to the property. He said that he would have to ask a brother of his for the data, and requested to use the phone. I gave him permission."

eratic State Committee, and a number while MacDonald had been a benedict of Officer's associates in the Legislature for some years.

After a number of the gentlemen had made flattering comments on William's public record, his honesty and so on, the Council District, while he was at City Hall it would not be difficult to see where so many of his votes come from. He has more visitors than all the other eight Councilmen combined, and most of them desire some favor large or small at his back. Congressman O'Connell, whom he will oppose for the nomination, seldom visits City Hall, although he has a small army constantly at his beckoning favors. Don O'Connell, Congressman's brother, backs after the wants of the members of the Devil leader's club and such level of students in the Tenth District, as his favors.

ALL the members of the Common Council went out to South Boston on March 17, just, Emancipation Day, to participate in the celebration. In the evening Councilmen Attridge, MacDonald, Currier and several others accepted an invitation to go over to Jeremiah McNamara's house.

Upon their arrival they were introduced to several young ladies who happened to be Jerry's guests that evening. The party set down and began conversing. One of the young ladies sitting near Attridge, noticing his worn expression, jumped up suddenly and said to him:

"I must not sit here, twenty wedding anniversary. Among these present were James H. McHugh, former Congressman McNamara, Fredrick Macleod, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, and a number while MacDonald had been a benedict of Officer's associates in the Legislature for some years.

AT THE END OF THE GREAT WHITE WAY

Copyright, 1910, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner

OLD as fire itself is the story of the foolish little moth that hurries with joyous enthusiasm toward the flame, tastes the delight of its radiance for a second and then is crumpled to cinders and scattered about by the wind.

To warn the moth against the flame would be wasted effort. Intoxicated by the spell of that beautiful bright light, he sacrifices whatever the future may hold of warm snugglings in automobile coats and rich pickings in expensive woollen goods laid away for the winter. Beforehand it seems to him that to bathe in that light for one single instant is the one thing in life worth striving for. Afterward nothing makes much difference, for what was the moth is merely a puff of carbon dioxide, a wisp of steam and an impalpable powder composed of the elements from which nature builds its billions of insects.

The cynic, who is a gentleman who thinks there can be no possible good in other people that he does not find in himself, would say that to speak of the idiocy of following the white lights along the illuminated highways in the great cities would be as useless as to preach to moths against candles.

But sometimes a moth escapes the candle with merely a set of singed wings, and still oftener the young men who are to direct the future affairs of this nation discover that the path that leads through the marble-paved, gilt-frescoed barroom ends in poverty and disgrace.

In this editorial we are not speaking exclusively of New York and the notorious chain of pleasure resorts along Broadway. Every town has its "White Way" in these days of plying civilization. Even the "Main street" of the country village, where the gallant youth congregate on Summer evenings, is likely to be as destructive of ambition and manhood as the most incandescent thoroughfare in the whole world.

Just now many people are singing in dead earnest a song entitled "A Short Life, but a Gay One," which an English comedian sang satirically in a Broadway theatre.

It might be a glorious existence, could it be lived as those who yearn for it would live it—no old age, no illness, no poverty, merely a few years of gaiety and riot, plenty to eat, to wear, to drink, and then a headlong plunge into shrouding oblivion.

But this is not a short life, nor a gay one, and the gayest it is at the beginning the longer and the more desolate it will be at the end.

Signs bearing the legend "Stop! Look! Listen!" are not posted up along any of the great white ways of the cities, but to the man who observes they are not necessary.

Walk up Broadway in New York some Summer evening with some one who "knows the game," which means that he has played it and knows how futile and worthless it all is.

Leaning against the mahogany bar in the first magnificent hotel you enter are half a dozen men.

One of them, your friend tells you, was once a prominent actor. Five years ago he was playing the leading part in one of the productions that enjoyed that delightful form of prosperity known as a run. He was drawing $800 every week, and not in stage money, but in crisp yellow bills.

Up on the Sound he had a pretty bungalow, a prettier wife and three still prettier children. He gave his services to "benefits" for broken-down brothers in his profession, his advice to young men struggling up from behind the spears in the chorus and his money to almost any one who asked it.

Solomon in all his glory never wore such magnificent waistcoats, the caravan of the Queen of Sheba was never so splendid as the automobile parades in which he conducted his friends to his Sunday entertainments at his waterside home.

To the brokers' apprentices and the shoe clerks and the "rah-rah boys" and the rich men's sons who watched his evening progress to and from the theatre he seemed the embodiment of the highest idea of the height of affluence.

A good fellow, talented, earning abundant money, generous, witty—what more could the most ambitious youth expect to be?

But when your friend halts this one-time scintillating star he receives in reply a sullen scowl and an unrecognizing stare.

Only an offer to buy a drink arouses a gleam of intelligence in the stupid, bloated face.

Friends gone, talent dissipated, money fled, even the memory destroyed by aphasia, he is a pitiable spectacle, leaning against the bar where he once was a sort of king, and looking furtively at the bartender to find if he is to be again ejected as he was last night.

"Too much prosperity," says your friend. "He couldn't stand it."

But it wasn't too much prosperity, for many, notably Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Carnegie, can survive prosperity and live to a green old age.

It was too much Great White Way, and the man who was once the ideal of the gaping Broadway youth has come to the end, and is gazing dully over the precipice.

In this man we have pictured a real character—an actor whose name you would have no trouble in recognizing were it printed here.

Time and again, after his powers had begun to flag, his friends sought to reinstate him in his old commanding position.

But sanitarians only restored the appearance of health, and long rests brought back strength that could endure over night and no more.

Mentally he never came back. To-day only a wife who still loves him has any faith that he will be a man again. Her hopes and ambitions went down with the wreck of his life. And the three pretty children are facing a very cold and very merciless world, and wondering where the next meal is to come from.

It is bad enough that the downfall of such a man brought with it that of his wife and children. But that is far from all the damage he did in his world.

For of the thousands of young men who saw and admired him on the stage and of the hundreds who knew him intimately no one can say how many were led to emulate him and to try in their little way to be as magnicent, as liberal as he was in his larger one.

It is not the lights nor the froccos nor the marble wainscoting nor even the tempting bills of fare that give the lure to the White Ways. It is the men who haunt them in their heyday and the admiration that is accorded them by the crowd.

"What became of that successful author—the man who used to write for all the magazines, and was reputed to be making money faster than he could spend it?" you ask your Broadway guide at the next corner.

"Oh, we'll run across him presently," is the reply. "He's down and out, too. Played the game too hard, and now he's come to the end of it. He couldn't stand success."

But success is no harder to stand than prosperity, as the useful, temperate lives of thousands of successful Americans bear daily testimony.

When you at last meet the man of whom you were asking, sitting on the pavement, sodden and numb, you can see that it was no success, but lack of it, that ruined him. He was successful with his pen; he was unsuccessful with himself.

He could make a character drawn from his imagination strong and attractive, but he could make of himself nothing but a weakling who could not say no to any invitation.

Human nature craves excitement; hence the lighted avenues in the cities along which are gathered the gale restaurants and whiskey palaces and hotels of modern life.

But excitement taken immoderately is quick to intoxicate.

Whoever has seen a green field or a shining river or a distant mountain knows the peace and inspiration that come from nature.

Whoever has spent a night on the Great White Way knows the pain and the remorse that follow.

If you find that you are becoming too fond of the lights, that your ideal of a hero is a man who comes into a restaurant and orders the waiters about as if he owned them, that you are thrilled to ecstasy by a song bawled across half a dozen champagne laden tables, pay five cents for a trolley ride away from it all and sit under a tree and consider it from a distance.

Then perhaps you will see how foolish it is to waste a life in riot; how a constant diet of frivolity saps your energy and your powers, and how the chief figures of the world you admired were all travelling the same road.

Your life, God-given and nursed and tended in infancy by a mother who loved you more than you can ever know, is yours to spend. But you have no right to waste it or to bring it to melancholy shipwreck long before its close.

The refuge that many of the devotees of the White Ways take in suicide is weak and cowardly, and your debt to the Creator who gave you life and the mother who gave her life to you is too great to be repaid in such a remorseless fashion.

Travel the White Ways if you will, but when you find that the end is poverty and suffering and desolation do not cry out and complain that you have not had a chance.

All along the way were warnings, human warnings, that spoke louder than any signs. If you did not heed them it was because you would not, and the world owes you neither sympathy nor sorrow.

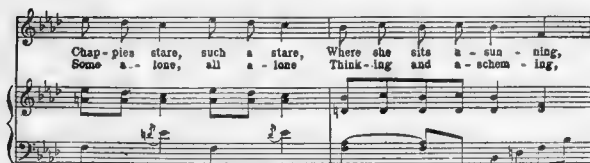

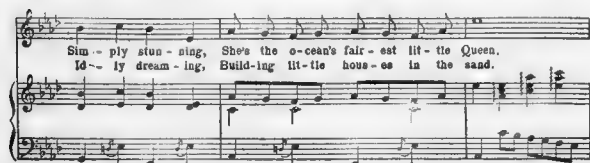

Too Bad That "Stop! Look! Listen!" Cannot Be Posted Along Every Over-Gay Thoroughfare, in Order That the Crowd May Learn Just Whither They Are Travelling.

BLUEBEARD—Who he was, where he Lived, and the Ruins of the Castle where He had his Secret Chamber of Death.

RUINS OF BLUEBEARD'S CASTLE — THE CHATEAU-MACHECOUL.

SOME remarkable discoveries have just been made in the ruins of the ancient castle of Macheoul, in Brittany, which once belonged to Gilles de Rais, who has been identified as the original of Bluebeard. In dungeons beneath the ground where the castle stood have been found bones of children, some chained to the walls and others showing signs of having been severed from the body during life. These remains were found in one dungeon after another, indicating that hideous atrocities had been committed on an enormous scale upon children. Undoubtedly children were the victims of the real Bluebeard, and not his many wives, as the old nursery tale has it. Gilles de Rais was a very great man, a Baron and a Marshal of France, who fought valiantly with Joan of Arc to drive the English from France. An insane thirst for blood took possession in later life, and according to tradition he murdered so many children that the whole countryside for dozens of miles around his castles were completely stripped of them. The truth of this tradition is supported to a considerable extent by recent researches. So rich and powerful was Gilles de Rais that he pursued his crimes unimpeded for years, and it was only when the whole power of the Church was exerted that he could be tried. He was born in 1396 and executed in 1440. It appeared that he became possessed of a great desire to learn the secret of the Philosopher's Stone. This desire had been suggested to him by alchemists who pretended that they had mastered the secret. But one of the necessary ingredients for the making of gold, so they told him, was human blood, and in his eagerness to procure this blood, as the sorcerers suggested, Gilles stopped at nothing. In searching the castle of Macheoul and going through the documents relating to his trial it is made plain that Gilles sacrificed many a child to his eagerness for gold. But strangely enough there was something of patriotism mixed with this great desire for gold. He heard of Joan of Arc, the Maid of Orleans; he hastened to see her, and returned to his castle to raise a corps of men for her army. But he needed money—money for arms, money for men—and he used all he could lay hands on. He fought side by side with Joan of Arc at Orleans, at Blois and in many of her great battles. No one fought more valiantly than Gilles in the siege of Orleans. But when the Maid of Orleans was slain (1430) at the stake Gilles became a changed man. All at once he sought nothing but gold, to make up for his enormous losses in the war. Whether in his castles of Macheoul, of Tiffauges and of Chamboeuf, he labored with the necromancers in his laboratories, searching the writings

THE LADY AND THE DANCER

MRS. CHARLES GILPIN, 3d, called the most beautiful woman in Philadelphia, has brought suit for divorce against her husband, society man, clubman and writer of the lyrics and music for the exclusive Mask and Wig Club of Quakerdom. Mrs. Gilpin says that her husband paid too many attentions to Nance Gwyn, who is known as the most beautiful dancer on the stage. Some time ago Miss Gwyn—or Mrs. McCaffrey—was divorced by her husband, who claimed that she was too fond of Mr. Gilpin. Mrs. Gilpin is, as one can see from her picture, very beautiful. She is witty, sprightly, and possesses, with her two sisters, Mrs. Hobbs' Strawberry and the Baroness Ruprecht Von Hocklin, of a share of the millions of Charles E. Berwind, railroad director, financier and coal operator.

Mr. Gilpin is studious, artistic, musical and has been considered somewhat of a social recluse—if that is not too much of a contradiction in terms.

Nance Gwyn, a dancing, unconventional, intellectual and sprightly, and also beautiful, as her pictures show. Of as good a family as Mrs. Gilpin too.

As a trio they present quite a social problem. Why, if Mrs. Gilpin's charges are true, did Mr. Gilpin prefer Miss Gwyn to his picture? Why, if the charges are true, did Mr. Gilpin prefer Miss Gwyn? What was lacking in the society leader that was present in the dancer? The case in many aspects is unusual, and analysis might throw some light upon the rapidly increasing tide of divorce among society men and the increasing number of marriages with women of the stage.

The principals will not, it seems, dissent, for the good of humanity, their motives. But perhaps a review of each side, in the form of a colloquy by the two women as they might give it. If they wanted to and based upon the facts and their temperaments, may help.

One might present the two sides of it like this:

THE LADY.

Of course when I married Mr. Gilpin, he gave to me a social standing that two Berwinds then wives did not have. Although my sister, Mrs. "Bobbie" Strawberry, and my other sister, the Baroness Von Hocklin, married equally as well. But then I brought to the Gilpin name the millions they did not have. Besides I am not plain, nor stupid nor laconic. I am, in fact, rather original and rather extraordinarily good looking. It would seem that our marriage should have turned out happily, and every one thought it would.

My ideals are not entirely American. I spent my early years abroad, and my sympathies are with the Old World rather than with the New. Some day I hope to live there permanently.

Prompted by my ideals, I did not always act in the conventional American fashion, but I should think Charles would have found this diverting. Alas! he did not seem to. I created for myself the most striking toilettes, and I designed our house on De Lancey Place as an epoch house for Philadelphia. It was Elizabethan with rich heavy carvings and windows, massive beauty. Its low ceilings, its leaded windows and huge fireplaces recalled an old English castle.

My household was all of pale rose-velvet handkerchiefs and white and gold furniture. Garlands of roses climbed over its sunny walls. Great golden vases were always filled with orchids and roses and into its scheme I slipped as a harmonious living feminine note.

How could my husband prefer this dancer in her commonplace surroundings—for they must have been commonplace in mine—to what he had? She was poor, she stood upon the stage for the applause and admiration of all who cared to pay to see her.

And Miss Gwyn Illustrating One of the Reasons

The Beautiful Mrs. Charles Gilpin, 3rd., Probably "Wondering Why."

On One Side the Berwind Millions and Beauty, on the Other Unadorned Art and Beauty—The Very Odd Matrimonial Complications of the Exclusive Gilpin 3ds.

One could hardly call her exclusive, now, could they? Our first break came when I saw that Charles actually would not keep his part of our at least implied contract. He had it in him to take the position in society that his family and name warranted. But he never cared to go to the Assemblies nor to the gay bachelors' hall, and as for Newport and Narragansett, they bored him.

No, he would rather stay at home writing verse and composing music and outlining those clever productions of the Mask and Wig Club. Oh, Charles was clever. That is why I feel aggrieved. I had to do all the social campaigning myself, and after our little boy was born Charles seemed to care less for it than ever.

My toilettes were the talk of Narragansett. I never quite attained Newport. But if Charles had been as keen to take his rightful place as he was to turn out those Mask and Wig shows, we would have been leaders in Newport.

However, I did the best I could to keep up the family traditions. Of course, I was greatly alone most of the time, and so was Charles. But if one is in society one owes a certain duty to society.

I am artistic. I am not conventional. What has she that I have not? It grew intolerable to be always in the position of pulling Charles away by his coat tails from a figurative can-can with that dancer. So I decided not to do any more pulling.

No, I cannot understand it. Here am I, original, witty, fascinating, cultured, beautiful and of course, there and rich, ambitious to have Charles all the place his family warrants him in taking, and he neglects me for a dancing girl. Is it not inexplicable?

"It Was Intolerable to Be Always in the Position of Pulling Charles Away by His Coat Tails from a Figurative Can-Can with That Dancing Girl."

THE DANCER.

I WON'T discuss Mr. Gilpin, but here are a few little losses one or the other, she should not complain. But if a woman loves her husband and has no interests at all, which would she choose, do you think?

I am not poor; my father was a millionaire rancher. There are men who are as rich as I am, artists in Austria. I toured the world when I was young and received quite as good an education as any society woman.

I married Mr. McCaffrey. He was a poor miner. There was no thought in my mind of family in return for my money or anything except my love for Mr. McCaffrey. Our marriage was unfortunate and we were divorced.

Then I went on the stage because I felt I had some thing beautiful in my dancing to show the world; because I wanted to do something; because I am an artist and because my dancing is artistry.

If my object in life made me pose before hundreds does not the society leader strip herself of exclusiveness when she poses in her new gowns before other hundreds at the opera, on the Newport beach, at the Casino, on Fifth avenue. She parades herself, but she is like a peacock, showing only its fine feathers. We dancers parade ourselves, but we are not parading fine feathers; we are showing our art.

If a woman knows that her husband does not care for the life of a society man, she should make up her mind to do one of two things: Let society go or let her best man! Throw off your conventionalities, be natural husband go. She has her choice, and if, choosing, she women for a while! Perhaps then you may hold them!
